- School 's minister Stephen Twiggs has a new strategy to encourage a healthier diet for pupils at British primary schools instead of fizzy drinks and crisps which could cause obesity. He wants pupils to have healthier choices. He wants to force school tuck shops to offer better nutrition and less junk food.
- As for the fizzy drinks ,the best way according to Mr Twiggs is to examine having easier ways to drinking water throughout the school day. The problem is that schools now don't have the water fountain facilities we all had when we were at school .The only source of water for pupils is washbasins in toilets which often turn into battlefields of fights and misbehaviour. Although the minister didn't ban the sale of fizzy drinks in schools he said he'd received complaints that in vending machines it is cheaper to buy fizzy drinks than water or fruit juice...
- In Britain , 1 in 7 children aged 15 is obese, and among six-year-olds, about 1 in 12 is very fat. The minister's 15 million pound plan is being tried in 15 schools. Each pupil is given a free meal, a piece of free fruit and a bottle of water at the beginning of each school day."Schools should feed the body as well as the mind", said Mr Twiggs .
- Giving children a good diet can have many benefits on their education .They have more energy , they find it easier to concentrate and can have better school results.
